CADE-SHARP.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dru Cade announce the marriage of their daughter, Douschka, to Lieut. William B. Sharp, of Camp Wheeler, Macon, Ga., July 6th, 1918, at home.

Only the immediate family of the bride and groom were present, the wedding being very quiet and simple.

The front hall was in pink and green, where punch was served by Misses Julia Cade and Robbie Covin.

In the parlors, Shasta daisies and ferns were used, the bride and groom entering alone to the strains of the wedding march, rendered by Miss Sara Boyd, while "Slumber Song" was softly played during the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. H. B. Blakely.

The bride was attired in white georgette crepe, with touches of blue, and white picture hat to match. She wore a corsage bouquet of brides' roses, and her only ornaments were a platinum pin, set with sapphires, the gift of the groom and diamond ear-rings, from the brides' mother.

Immediately after the ceremony refreshments of cake and cream were served, after which the bride donned her traveling dress of Peking blue charmeuse, with grey hat and coat and accessories to match.

The happy couple left by auto for Calhoun Falls, where they took the train for Macon, their future home.

Mrs. Sharp is the third daughter of Mr. and John Dru Cade, and her bright and cheery presence will be greatly missed in her home circle.

Lieut. Sharp is a young man of sterling worth, which he has proven by his rapid advancement in Uncle Sam's service, where he has been for several years, first on Border duty, and later at Camp Wheeler, as First Lieutenant.
